J. CREATIVE OUTPUTS – KNOWLEDGE TRANSLATION

J.1. Patient-oriented Disease Management in a Rare Disease Context

J.1.1 Online Patient Disease Management Programs

The Scleroderma Patient-centered Intervention Network (SPIN) designs, tests, and then publicly disseminates free-of-charge online evidence-based programs to support successful patient disease management. The programs are designed to be easy to navigate and engaging, with creative animations, videos, and visuals to provide entertaining educational segments on key topics. Each program has sections to help users develop and maintain a personalized program for disease management, including goal-setting strategies with examples, progress tracking, sharing goals and progress with friends and family, and patient videos of their experiences.

Two online programs have been finalized:

1. SPIN-HAND is a hand exercise program designed to prevent or reduce functional impairment due to hand involvement from scleroderma. The core program consists of 4 modules that address specific aspects of hand function, including (1) Thumb Flexibility and Strength (3 exercises); (2) Finger Bending (3 exercises); (3) Finger Extension (3 exercises); and (4) Wrist Flexibility and Strength (2 exercises). Separate versions of each exercise are available for patients with mild/moderate and more severe hand involvement.

SPIN-HAND is currently available to the public: <https://tools.spinsclero.com/>

2. SPIN-SELF is a general scleroderma self-management program designed to increase disease-management self-efficacy. It includes modules on (1) Coping with Pain; (2) Skin Care, Finger Ulcers and Raynaud's; (3) Sleep Problems; (4) Fatigue; (5) Gastrointestinal Symptoms; (6) Itch; (7) Managing Emotions and Stress; (8) Coping with Appearance Changes; and (9) Effective Communication with Healthcare Providers.

SPIN-SELF is expected to be available publicly in 2024.

J.1.2. Support Group Leader Training Program Manual and Trainer Guide

The Scleroderma Patient-centered Intervention Network – Scleroderma Support Group Leader Education Program (SPIN-SSLED; www.spinsclero.com/projects/ssled), which is currently undergoing testing, is the only program of its kind in any disease in the world. To guide the SPIN-SSLED Program, Dr. Thombs' team developed a Participant Program Manual and Instructor Program Manual with a comprehensive curriculum for each training session. Following Dr. Thombs' recently launched CIHR-funded trial of the program, he will publish these manuals online under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-ShareAlike copyright so that the program can be adapted and used for people with other diseases.

J.1.3. Scleroderma Patient-centered Intervention Network (SPIN) Knowledge Translation (KT) Tools

SPIN regularly generates infographics to provide patient-friendly and easily understood research summaries to its 1,600+ followers on Facebook, 500+ followers on Twitter, and via its webpage (<https://spinsclero.com>). See infographics webpage for examples in English (<https://spinsclero.com/en/news-media/infographics>) and French (<https://spinsclero.com/fr/nouvelles-medias/infographiques>).

J.2. Depression Screening in Medical Settings

Dr. Thombs' DEPRESSD Project Team creates KT tools to facilitate interpretation and implementation of results from its meta-analyses for health care providers who may not fully understand complex test accuracy results in published studies. There are currently four examples available online, which are highlighted in corresponding meta-analysis articles by Dr. Thombs' collaboration.

2. Using the PHQ-2 Alone and in Combination with the PHQ-9 to Screen for Depression: A Practice-based Perspective. <http://depressionscreening100.com/phq-2/>. Interactive knowledge translation tool to help health care providers implement research findings from Levis B et al., JAMA, 2020.
3. Using the EPDS to Screen for Depression in Pregnancy and Postpartum: A Practice-based Perspective. <http://depressionscreening100.com/phq-2/>. Interactive knowledge translation tool to help health care providers implement research findings from Levis B et al., BMJ, 2020.

4. Using the HADS-D to Screen for Depression: A Practice-based Perspective. <http://depressionsscreening100.com/phq-2/>. Interactive knowledge translation tool to help health care providers implement research findings from Wu Y et al., under review.

J.3. Canadian Task Force on Preventive Health Care KT Tools

I chaired the Task Force from 2017-2021. For each of its guidelines, the Task Force creates a series of KT tools aimed to facilitate understanding and usability of its recommendations on prevention activities in Canadian primary care, including screening interventions. In 2018 alone, the Task Force disseminated just under 20,000 copies of its KT tools through website downloads and distribution at conferences and other venues, and there were more than 50,000 visits to Task Force Knowledge Translation Tool web pages. KT tools for all Task Force guidelines can be accessed on the Task Force website (<https://canadiantaskforce.ca/tools-resources/>).

J.4. COVID-19 Mental Health Evidence Synthesis

J.4.1. Consultation with the Public Health Agency of Canada

I provided consultation in 2021. I developed a report on COVID-19 mental health, including changes in mental health symptoms and intervention options and advised on public communication strategies.

J.4.2. United Kingdom Public Mental Health Implementation Centre

Dr. Sarah Markham, a patient partner and team member in our COVID-19 research presented findings and implications in an internal briefing session at the United Kingdom House of Commons to advise future public mental health recommendations (June 7, 2023).
